COMMITTEE OF ETCI

SEMINAR DESCRIPTION

With effect from 1st October 2009 all electrical installations must be constructed in accordance with the Fourth Edition to the National Rules for Electrical Installations. This latest edition of the Wiring Rules was developed and produced by the Electro-Technical Council of Ireland. ETCI ran a series of seminars throughout Ireland during last February and March to familiarise the electrical industry with the Fourth Edition of the Wiring Rules. Feedback from these seminars was very positive as is evident from some of the comments illustrated below*. With the mandatory date for the Fourth Edition now imminent and responding to the demand from the Electrical industry, ETCI is holding four extra seminars on “the Rules”.

SEMINAR OBJECTIVE

The objective of this seminar is to introduce and to give an overview of the Fourth Edition of the National Rules for Electrical Installations, ET101. Topics of the seminar will cover: new restructuring of the Rules,

- technical changes resulting from decisions at international level (IEC and CENELEC) which necessitate the revision of existing rules,
- new sections for areas not previously covered, for example marinas, amusement parks, photo-electric equipment and extra-low voltage lighting,
- changes and new developments in types of equipment, work practices and building practices,
- medical locations.

SEMINAR PRESENTERS

Jim Keogh, Chairman of ETCI Technical Committee 2 (TC2 - Electrical Installations) is the Director of the course with presenters drawn from TC2. All presenters have worked in this field for many years and have participated in the development of international standards on electrical installations and in the compilation of the Fourth Edition.

SEMINAR MATERIAL

As the Seminar deals exclusively with the National Rules for Electrical Installations, Fourth Edition, ET101:2008, this publication will be available for sale to seminar participations at a special seminar price of €80.

FEEDBACK FROM THE FEBRUARY/MARCH 2009 SEMINARS

The make up of those who attended the seminars was: electrical contractors (40%); electricians (35%), consulting engineers (7%) and other classifications (18%). The "other classifications" included representatives from project management companies, local authorities, educational establishments, FÁS, industry facilities management, HSA, HSE, and the Insurance industry.

From ETCI's analysis of seminar survey results, it is evident that the vast majority of attendees were very satisfied with the content, the structure and the delivery of the seminar.

Below is a sample of the comments made by those who attended the seminar:

*COMMENTS ON THE SEMINARS

"Overall the seminar was well organised and worthwhile. The four presentations were to the point and educational. I found the question and answer sessions very beneficial because it gave the participants the opportunity to clarify any matters arising" (Pat Kearney, Electrical Instructor, FÁS Ballyfermot).

"A number of Dublin City Council staff recently attended the briefing seminars run by ETCI on the new edition of ET101. The staff found the seminars extremely useful and the changes from the previous edition were clearly explained and illustrated by the presenters. The seminars proved to be a cost effective way of bringing staff up to speed on the new edition as opposed to leaving staff to read through the new edition by themselves."
(Pat Caden, Senior Engineer, Dublin City Council)

"A number of technical staff from Webprint attended the recent ETCI workshop on the National Rules for Electrical Installations, ET101:2008. This workshop was very worthwhile in terms of getting to grips with the changes that this new publication has brought about. The workshop was very informative and it afforded the perfect platform to partake in an interactive discussion on the implications for industry of the new Rules."
(Eric Bergin, Engineering Manager, Webprint Concepts Ltd., Cork)

"The Presenters were very good and very knowledgeable with excellent presentations which were accompanied by a clear PowerPoint presentation. The Q & A Session was very informative - any grey areas concerning queries on the implementation of the new rules were dealt with."
(Edward Heazle, Electrical Contractor, Waterford)
